

Valuable insight into legal life

Newcastle University law lecturers Kate Lindsay and Sher Campbell visited Chatham High.

ABOVE: Law students Abe Meredith and Madeleine Rowley also shared their experiences studying Law at Newcastle University. RIGHT: Kate Lindsay and Sher Campbell talk to Chatham High students.

CHATHAM High School's senior students have been given an insight to the path a law degree might take you, thanks to a visit from the Newcastle University faculty of business and law.

Newcastle Uni law lecturers Sher Campbell and Kate Lindsay, as well as law students Abe Meredith and Madeleine Rowley, were on hand to share their experiences of studying and teaching law and the opportunities that have arisen from undertaking a degree at Newcastle.

Chatham High students took part in a series of question and answer sessions and were able to try their hand at some role playing based around hypothetical legal situations.