

Life times

Focus on events and people in our community

Wow of a day at Chatham High

PRIMARY school students from around the region got the opportunity to experience high school and tertiary education when they visited Chatham High School for its annual WOW Day.

Students from Harrington, Coopernook and Chatham primary schools experienced lessons in woodwork, drama, agriculture, science, coding, art, cooking, geography, photoshop and maths.

The range of classes meant students had an opportunity to create slime, cook coconut chocolate treats, undertake a maths-themed amazing race and much more.

Students from Cundletown, Lansdowne, Manning Gardens and Upper Lansdowne primary schools also took part WOW Day.

Chatham High staff were assisted by year nine peer leaders in running the classes.

The University of Newcastle's Aim High unit also attended the day, with university students running a coding class which involved teaching the primary students with interactive tablets.

Chatham High School first started hosting the WOW days in 2011, with this year the fifth time they've held the event.

Above: Ty Vassalli does some coding with the University of Newcastle's Jarrod Wilton.

Left: Jacobi Shaw enjoyed the coding lessons on interactive tablets.

Right: Rosa Gibson gets ready for the cooking class.

